YULETIDE

AT OLD TUCSON

In 1866, the Claus family rode into the American West on a magical train car in search of the "West Pole." Somewhere amongst the saguaros of Tucson, their magical train car failed. Until they could find a new vessel capable of holding the magic of Christmas spirit, they were stranded. As they created a series of magical bells from metal salvaged from their train car, the Claus family fell in love with this valley that would later become Tucson Mountain Park and decided it would make a fine western base, thus settling their own West Pole of choice. The West Pole would become the home base for many of the extended Claus family over the years, in addition to the sole location where the Clauses continue to manufacture their magical bells to this day.

Present Day: Jack Frost has come to the West Pole seeking to take over the town and commandeer the magic of the Christmas spirit for his own uses. Join the Claus family as they attempt to keep safe the magic of Christmas spirit and hold back Jack Frost's icy advance!
